Art Unit: 1792

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

This application currently names joint inventors. In considering patentability of the claims under 35 U.S.C. 103(a), the examiner presumes that the subject matter of the various claims was commonly owned at the time any inventions covered therein were made absent any evidence to the contrary. Applicant is advised of the obligation under 37 CFR 1.56 to point out the inventor and invention dates of each claim that was not commonly owned at the time a later invention was made in order for the examiner to consider the applicability of 35 U.S.C. 103(c) and potential 35 U.S.C. 102(e), (f) or (g) prior art under 35 U.S.C. 103(a).

Claims 14-21 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by WO 02/47139 (EBARA CORPORATION).

EBARA CORPORATION teaches as shown in Figures 52 and 54B which is comprised of a substrate processing unit. EBARA CORPORATION is comprised of the following elements: a substrate receiving ring 900 to which a seal ring is mounted; a vertically movable substrate holder or seal press 908 having a substrate fixing ring movable as shown by arrows in Figure 52 so as to hold a substrate by nipping a peripheral portion of the substrate between the substrate fixing ring 609 and the seal ring 906 to seal the peripheral portion of the substrate during processing of the substrate; and a temporary retaining section that is mounted to the substrate receiving ring and positioned around the seal ring to temporarily retaining the substrate thereon while forming a space between the substrate and the seal ring; wherein the substrate receiving ring and the substrate fixing ring hold the substrate with its front surface facing downward; and wherein the temporary retaining section is comprised of a plurality of temporary retaining pins 902 as shown in Figure 54A having a forward tapered surface which are biased upwardly by an elastic member, and which inherently must lower integrally with the substrate holder against the elastic force of the elastic member from its position as shown in Figure 52 in order to seal the edge portion with seal ring 906 so as to prevent contact of the treatment fluid with the retaining pins, and inherently return to the original position as the substrate holder rises due to the elasticity of spring 910.

EBARA CORPORATION teaches every positively claimed structural element of the apparatus set forth in claims 14 and 18. With respect to claim 15-17 and 19-21, EBARA CORPORATION shows in Figure 52 that the lower surface of the substrate to be treated faces downwardly and below the lower surface is an open area as defined by the combination of wafer and substrate receiving ring into which a catalyst-imparting medium, pre-plating medium or pre-plating treatment medium is capable of being applied.
